Mitigating Repatriation Challenges during Covid-19

Medical emergencies are unpredictable and can happen to anyone, anywhere and anytime! When the unexpected occurs while you are far from home, you or your family must navigate all the complexities of repatriation to home or an appropriate hospital for ongoing care.

This year especially has brought unimaginable challenges to medical flight services, leaving the ill or injured domestic & international traveller stranded and unable to return home. COVID-19 has heightened the need for an emergency medical plan. Today's travellers are confronted with health and transportation concerns in a world with travel and border restrictions. There are continuous changes to cross-border processes which include COVID-19 testing and quarantine restrictions for both medical teams and the ill traveller. The work of Angels of Flight is more important than ever, as there are fewer medical flight options and the cost of air ambulance service has gone up during the pandemic. Whether within Canada or abroad, Angels of Flight is ready to help bring you home or to another healthcare facility. We provide guidance, support, and solutions for travellers, no matter where they are in the world.

A recent client Cindy says "My mom and I are very grateful for the medical team - Dave and Charity - for their kindness, patience and care throughout the process. We are also very grateful for the Angels of Flight program.

We know that this was a rare opportunity that we had, to bring my father home to Greece. Thank you both for your quick replies and behind-the-scenes work to make this happen. "

To better serve our travelers whether for business or pleasure, we have added a new option available to bring you home. "Operation Going Home" coordinates your medical flight to avoid delays in airline travel, reduce risks of Covid-19 contact with the added support of a medical team on board high performance Canadian jet aircraft. You can call and book a private flight or share the costs with another client, room for luggage, family and travel in comfort with the assurance a medical team is with you on board to provide care.

Operation Going Home has flights scheduled to Mexico on or about November 18, 2020 and Europe on or about November 25, 2020 from Canada with a return flight for those coming back to North America. Other flight options will be posted on our website www.angellofflightcanada.com or we can schedule your own medical flight.
